Sixty-Three Bodies Taken From Spangler Mine, 13 More Are in Sight; Toll Taken By Gas Explosion May Reach Total of 80

Uncertainty Exists as to Exact Number of Men Entering Workings.

32 ARE IN HOSPITAL

If Others Were Entrapped Belief Is They Perished in Rising Water; Efforts Continued Today on Repair of Damaged Pumping System.

By Associated Press.

SPANGLER, Nov. 7.—The bodies of 63 miners who lost their lives in the Reilly mine explosion here yesterday lay in the temporary morgue at noon today. Thirteen others were in sight and 32 injured were in the miners' hospital.

Summarizing the situation leaders in rescue gave out the following:

Men in mine when explosion occurred, not more than 112.

Bodies recovered, 63.

Bodies located in mine, 13.

Total accounted for, 108.

There was still some uncertainty as to the number of men who went to work yesterday but it was pointed out that the total was 112 the missing, 17 miners would probably be found in the eighth heading where the water had risen so rapidly that exploration had been impossible. Even if these men had gone to that part of the mine it was asserted they had probably perished. If that proves true the leaders said the number of dead would reach 80.

Efforts were being made today to repair the pumps, damaged by the explosion, and a force of workers was cutting a passage way through the coal between the eighth and ninth headings. With this completed, they hoped to reach the last of the galleries about noon.

SPANGLER, Nov. 7.—On the "corner of death" at the Miners' Hospital here rests a youth of 22. His name is Abe Craig, his coolness saved a dozen lives.

"There isn't much to tell," said Craig. "We went down at 7 o'clock and entered heading No. 10 on the left. A few minutes later there was a crash. I told the boys that we had better get out. Then there was a rush of gas. Luckily our door was open or the explosion would have knocked it down. I stumbled in and about 35 of us waited to see what would happen.

"Outside, there were yell and one of our gang shouted to tell them there was fresh air in our place. I opened the door and three or four men staggered in. The boys rushed out and dragged in others. We revived them.

"Then I looked out again. All I could see was bodies. The after-damp could be seen through the headings. I was rolling through the headings. I opened inside and closed the door. There was nothing to do but wait for rescuers.

"From 7:30 until about 2 o'clock we stayed in the chamber. Older men were getting fatigued. Young fellows were holding out pretty well. Nobody had very much to say. Some of the boys were praying.

"Finally, the after-damp worked its way around and under the door. There was only one thing to do, I told them we would have to run for it. We opened the door and ran down the headings. It was a tough dash, stumbling over bodies. We began to choke. Some of the boys fell but those who had any fight left kept on.

"We ran into a fallen rock between the seventh and ninth headings. That probably was where the explosion took place.

"I had a hunch that if we got to the sixth heading we would find fresh air, but you can believe me that last 100 yards was something awful. Coughing and strangled we kept on and finally I ran slap bang into the air. I was dizzy but I screamed to the boys. Most of them who got to the sixth heading keeled over.

"Then I heard men coming and I knew they were rescuers. They got us out. Only the young men made it. I am afraid all the older men lost their lives."

S. R. Martin in Hospital. S. R. Martin, traveling salesman, who lives with his brother-in-law, M. W. Alter in Ninth street, West Side, was taken to Allegheny General Hospital, Pittsburgh, today for treatment. He was accompanied by Mrs. Martin and by a sister-in-law, Mrs. Frank Moore, of Pittsburgh, who had been here on a visit. He has been seriously ill.

Bridge Repairs Progressing. Work on the north side of east and west approaches of the Youghiogheny river bridge is being pushed by the contractor in charge. The south side of the structure has been completed and while only one-way traffic is possible, the vehicles move over one continuous stretch of improved roadway.

Engineer Stein Recovering. Engineer George Stein of Meyersdale, who was injured about two weeks ago when Baltimore, Ohio train No. 69 was wrecked at Somers, is on the road to recovery. He is a patient in a McKeesport hospital.

ARTMAN BUSINESS, PIONEER IN CITY, PASSES TO OTHERS

The novelty store of Artman & Work, one of the oldest business establishments in Connellsville, has been sold to Westmoreland county merchants, who have taken charge. The new owners are Charles Miller and William Fox. Mr. Miller was here today becoming acquainted with his trade and the stock of the store.

The deal has already been consummated but the former owners will remain for a time to assist the purchasers in becoming familiar with their line of business.

The sale brings to an end the career of a pioneer merchant of Connellsville. For the past 35 years Artman's has been known to Connellsville. Since 1913 it has been Artman & Work. The store was first located on the site now occupied by Krobacher's. D. K. Artman purchased it from C. C. Grill and from that time to the present has been assisted by Mrs. Artman, who has been a big factor in the operation of the store. The business was conducted there for six years and then was moved to the Seisonton Building. About 13 years later the business expanded to such an extent that more room was needed and the entire first floor of the same building, the present location, was occupied.

About nine years ago, Charles L. Work, son-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. Artman became associated in the business and the firm of Artman & Work grew prosperous. He has since become engaged in the coal business, however, and Mrs. Artman being unable to bear the burden of operating the store alone, it was determined to sell.

CHANGES IN HATS

Headgear Is Wider and Broader for Fall and Winter.

No Longer Crushes Into Shape—Bult Upon Frames That Stand Away From the Head.

The first demand of every woman for the new season's fashion is that her hats shall be in-line trim—that she shall adorn her head according to the latest dictates of style. Her dresses may pass—she can at least wear a suit—but an oldish hat is something too damning for words, observes a fashion critic in the New York Times.

Now the hats of the present season have changed just as much as the frocks. They are wider and broader. They no longer crush into shape, but are built upon frames that stand away from the head and create a formality of line entirely new.

From Paris comes the news that the cloche will be more popular than ever. But it is a very much elaborated cloche. It is larger than it has been for some time. It spreads out on three sides with the abandon that only a hat of French origin can show.

As for the felt hats, they are no more numerous than the straw hats were in the summer. There are silk and satin hats and devoré hats and velvet hats, but felt hats, those real exponents of the winter mode, are much in the minority. However, they are smarter this season than they ever have been before. On the streets, in the places where smart women gather, you will find the felt hats surging in the center of the stage.

They are blocked into interesting shapes, usually with puffed and draped crowns, and they are made with narrow brims, sometimes wider at the sides, that droop over the face and give a mushroom effect to the general contour of the hat. The trimming is very sparsely done.

FLAT CREPE IS NEW FABRIC

None, Beautiful Silk of Compact Texture and Fine Quality—Offered in All Shades.

With the establishment of a new silhouette it is only natural that a new fabric should also gain favor, for in the expression of a decided vogue an adaptable material is always of paramount importance. That flat crepe is the material of the moment is more than hearsay, and its popularity is recognized fact.

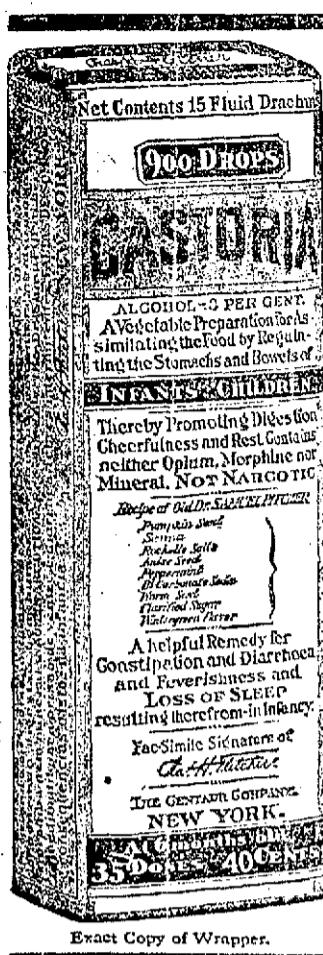

Name, a new flat crepe, is a beautiful silk of a compact texture and fine quality. It has the soft almost non-crushable characteristic that distinguishes materials that are all pure silk and that is such a decided asset in a fabric of its weight. The absolute perfection necessary in the weaving of a flat crepe gives Name the quality appeal desired in dresses of the better sort.

The value for this flat crepe is based on many apparent reasons. In the development of the circular and draped silhouettes the grace and folds of the design are most appreciated in a fabric that catches the light on its many surfaces. A frosted sheen that is a feature of this fabric enhances in its very nature the flowing lines of today's gowns. None is offered in all the radiant shades to be featured in formal gowns this autumn and is exceptionally handsome in navy blue and black.

Piles

are usually due to straining when constipated. Nujol being a lubricant keeps the food waste soft and therefore prevents straining. Doctors prescribe Nujol because it not only soothes the suffering of piles but relieves the irritation, brings comfort and helps to remove them.

Nujol is a lubricant—not a medicine or laxative—so cannot gripe. Try it today.

Two rare specimens of the jeweler's art in box making which have been imported to this country are of the satchel type. One has a mounting of chased silver, the box itself being of silver grey dobbin. The other, which is made of black unpolished did, has a skeleton mounting set with sapphires and diamonds. There is an embossed and design decoration; one side of the box with certain parts being pointed in sapphire blue to match the blue of the sapphire in the mounting.

The most skilled workers in the leather industry are now busily embossing, carving, painting by hand and ornamenting with metal and stones the most finely dyed and finished leather. Mountings of solid gold, gold washed silver and platinum continue to be favorites for the flat leather purse and card case. To give variety these metal pieces, which are inlaid in leather, are sometimes skillfully engraved. Hand carving and embossing and hand painting add a further variety to leathers which enter into the makeup of bags.

Henceforth Slat.

For full wear, especially attractive suit is of blue homespun clothed with silk. Its straight box coat and beautifully cut skirt are distinctive and vastly different from the commonplace models of the early summer.

CHIC FALL SUITS

Soft Unbroken Lines Characterize Winsome Models.

Jacquette Effect With Varying Degrees of Bloused Backs Striking Feature in New Outfits.

To develop a suit in the soft unbroken lines that characterize a dress is one of style's requisites for those models that would be truly smart. The employment of these fabrics and adherence to the graceful lines of today's silhouette have made this possible not only a possibility, but the means of achieving some unusually attractive creations. One company has had exceptional success in developing the new model in fall suits, and is showing a varied and interesting line of designs.

The jacquette effect with varying degrees of bloused backs is a striking feature of the new suits. The fitted hip line achieved by a narrow band or deep凹型 is used and full sleeves are interspersed with narrow bands showing a fitted shoulder line.

One of the models with a fitted hip band handsomely affects the effect of a dress by four wide panels divided with broad bands of fur that lay over the skirt several inches below the hem. This number is fastened on a fine velveteen and trimmed with lynx.

Paris' latest effect calling for the fitted sleeve with turned cuff is being skillfully interpreted by this house, and in outfitting the full cuff is done on in the chest first. One of the most interesting of the new styles shows an extreme sole stretching on the skirt with a soft draped effect held in place by a large ornament. In connection with this treatment, the back is severely straight and tailored.

Straight line cuts in those numbers of staple character are shown in Marcellin cloth and establish a preference for a short coat effect that gives youth and a great deal of color to these numbers. Jersey and sateen are shown in the deep skirt collar of these suits and button pockets of the far give them a sturdy, off-duty look that may be enjoyed in winter.

True tailoring is one of the distinctive qualities of several houses and nicely exploits the fine workmanship that typifies the entire showing of this manufacturer.

RICH HAT OF BROWN VELVET

This stunning hat of brown velvet is completely stitched and sufficient to itself with only a band of grosgrain ribbon as trim. It is in splendid harmony with the machine embroidery of the gown worn by the model.

CHAPTER XII

The Crater of Hell.

Presently Gale, upon turning a sharp corner, was utterly amazed to see that the split in the lava stood out and widened into an arroyo. It was so green and soft and beautiful in all the angry, contorted red surrounding that Gale could scarcely credit his sight. Blanco Sol whistled his welcome to the scent of water. Then Gale saw a great hole, a pit in the shiny lava, a dark, cool, shady well. There was evidence of the fact that flood seasons water had an outlet into the arroyo. The soil appeared to be fine sand, in which a reddish thing predominated; and it was abundantly covered with a long grass, still partly green. Mesquites and palo verdes dotted the arroyo and gradually closed in thickets that obstructed the view.

"Short it all bears me," exclaimed Ladd. "What a place to hole up in! We could have hid here for a long time. Beddin' was short right about the Indians. An', I can see Rojas' finish somewhere up along that awful hell-hole."

Camp was made on a level spot. Yaqul took the horses to water, and then turned them loose in the arroyo. It was a tired and somber group that sat down to eat. Mercedes was calm, but her great dark eyes burned in her white face. Yaqul watched her. The others looked at her with unspoken pride. Presently Thorne wrapped her in his blanket, and she seemed to fall asleep at once.

Little of Yaqul's purpose or plan could be elicited from him. The rangers and Thorne, however, talked in low tones. It was absolutely impossible for Rojas and his men to reach the waterhole before noon of the next day. And long before that time the fugitives would have decided on a plan of defense.

"What stuns me is that Rojas stuck to our trail," said Thorne, his lined and haggard face expressive of dark passion. "He has followed us into this fearful desert. He'll lose men, horses, perhaps his life. He's only a bandit, and he stands to win no gold. All for a poor little helpless woman—just a woman! I can't understand it."

"Shore—just a woman," replied Ladd, solemnly nodding his head.

Then there was a long silence, during which the men gazed into the fire. Those were cold, hard, grim faces upon which the light flickered.

"Sleep," said Yaqul.

Thorne rolled in his blanket close beside Mercedes. Then one by one the rangers stretched out, feet to the fire. Gale found that he could not sleep. His eyes were weary, but they would not stay shut; his body ached for rest, yet he could not be still.

The Yaqul sat like an image carved out of lava. The others lay prone and quiet. Would another night see any of them lie that way, quiet forever? Gale sat up after a while and again watched the fire. Nell's sweet face floated like a wreath in the pale smoke—glowed and flushed and smiled in the embers. Other faces shone there—his sister's—that of his mother. Gale shook off the tender memories. This desolate wilderness with its forbidding silence and its dark promise of hell on the morrow—this was not the place to unnerve one, self with thoughts of love and home.

Toward dawn Gale managed to get some sleep. Then the morning broke with the sun hidden back of the uplift of the plateau. The horses trooped up the arroyo and snorted for water. After a hurried breakfast the pack-saddles were hidden in holes in the lava. The saddle was left where they were, and the horses allowed to graze and wander at will. Guitars were filed, a small bag of food was packed, and blankets made into a bundle. Then Yaqul faced the steep ascent of the lava slope.

The trail he followed led up on the right side of the fissure, opposite to the one he had come down. It was a steep climb, and encumbered as the men were they made but slow progress. At length the rim widened out and the red, smoky crater yawned beneath. Yaqul left the trail and began clambering down over the rough and twisted convolutions of lava which formed the rim. It was with extreme difficulty that the party followed him. The cheva was there to hinder passage. Finally the Indian halted upon a narrow bench of flat, smooth lava, and his followers worked with exceeding care and effort down to his position.

At the back of this bench, between bunches of choya, was a niche, a shallow cave with floor lined apparently with mud. Yaqul spread blankets inside, left the cheva and the sack of food, and with a gesture at once humble, yet that of a chief, he invited Mercedes to enter. A few more gestures and fewer words disclosed his plan. In this inaccessible nook Mercedes was to be hidden. The men were to go around upon the opposite side and block the trail leading down to the waterhole.

Ladd chose the smallest gun in the party and gave it to Mercedes.

"Shore it's best to go the limit on 'em ready," he said, simply. "The chances are you'll never need it. But if you do—

He left off there, and his break was significant. Mercedes answered him with a fearless and indomitable dash of eyes. Thorne was the only one who showed any shaken nerve. His leave-taking of his wife was affecting and glass, however, like the naked sight, could not catch the slightest moving object out there upon the lava. A long hour of slow, mounting suspense wore on.

"Shore it's all goin' to be queer as the Yaqul," said Ladd.

Indeed, the strange, thin, silent action, the somber character of the Indian had not been without effect upon the minds of the men. Then the weird, desolate, tragic scene added to the vague sense of mystery. And now the disappearance of Rojas' band, the long wall in the silence, the fading certainty of invisible foes crawling, creeling closer and closer, lent to the situation a final touch that made it unreal.

"They reckon' there's a mind behind them Gremers," replied Jim. "Or maybe we ain't done Rojas' credit. If somethin' would only come off!"

That Ladd, the coolest, the most provocatively nonchalant of men in those of pearl, should begin to show a nervous strain was all the more indicative of a subtle pernicious unreality.

"Dogs, look sharp!" suddenly called Ladd. "Low down to the left—maybe three hundred yards. See, along by them somes of lava-heated the chrys. First off I thought it was a sheep. But it's the Yaqul!"

"Crawlin' swift as a lizard! Can't you see him?"

It was a full moment before Jim's companions could locate the Indian. First as a smudge, Yaqul wound himself along with incredible rapidity. His advance was all the more remarkable for the fact that he appeared to pass directly under the drowsy chrys. Sometimes he paused to sit his head and look.

STORIES OF GREAT INDIANS

By Elmo Scott Wilson

Copyright, 1922, Western Newspaper Union.

CHIEF OURAY, THE DICTATOR OF THE UTES

"To the Cheyenne Headmen and Utes of the White River Agency. You are hereby requested and commanded to cease hostilities against the whites, injuring no innocent person or any other further than to protect your own lives and property. Do not make any unauthorized combinations and combinations, as anything further will ultimately end in disaster to all parties."

(Signed) "OURAY."

SUCH is a document unique in Indian history. No other Indian chief had a secretary to whom he dictated orders and there is no other case on record of a chief calling upon his warlords in this manner to lay down their arms after they had shed white blood. It is evidence of Ouray's greatness that his command was obeyed immediately.

In 1870 Agent N. C. Meeker had trouble with the White River Utes and called for troops to protect him. Maj. T. T. Thornburgh with a force of 150 men marched to his relief. The Utes took this as a declaration of war and attacked them on the Milk River in northwestern Colorado. Part of them besieged the soldiers, killing 13, including the commander, and wounding 48. Others attacked the agency, murdered Meeker and nine other white men, taking five women and children captives. Then came Ouray's message and the "ite war" was over.

Ouray, "The Arrow," was born in Taos, N. M., in 1834. He was baptised by a Jesuit priest and educated in a little Mexican school at Taos where he learned the Spanish tongue. In 1860 he returned to the Utes who were then engaged in a bitter struggle with the Navajo, Cheyennes and Arapahoes.

One day a war party of 30 Utes led by Ouray was attacked by 800 Arapahoes. The chief rallied his warlords, formed them in a hollow square and then in a fight lasting 14 hours they finally beat off their assailants. Soon after this Ouray's son was captured by the Arapahoes. From that day the Ute chief never allowed his tribe to rest from hostility toward them. In later years he appealed to the government to restore his son to him, but the boy had become so much an Arapahoe that he refused to come.

Because of Ouray's knowledge of Spanish he was made the government interpreter to the Utes in 1866 and became head chief soon afterwards.

His friendship toward the whites was unwavering and he adopted some of their ways. He had a well-cultivated farm on which he built a comfortable house and there he died August 24, 1880.
